Christy,

The latest numbers without running a query are from 2013. Your question was : How many offenders were released from Administrative Segregation directly into the community. In 2013, we released 98 offenders from Administrative Segregation directly into the community. The Director of Operations, Chris Kleymeyer, has been providing information to the Arthur Liman Public Interest Fellowship & Fund. The Liman Project provides an opportunity for Yale students to work together with faculty on research and advocacy relating to detention and justice. My recommendation is to contact Johanna Kalb, Liman Program Director, at johanna.kalb@yale.edu. for any further information pertaining to your question. The Liman project has been working closely for some time with the members of the Association of State Correctional Administrators regarding issues of surrounding restrictive status housing.

Respectfully yours,

Mike Caudill
